In the Gregorian calendar, a period beginning on January 1 and ending on December 31, consisting of 365 or 366 days in 12 months. Also called calendar year.

Aug 15, 2008 · The Years, like the liters or inches, are a unit of measure; they are not the owner of the object being measured. The apostrophe seems out of place in that context. It is being asked to do the job of a preposition that shouldn't have gone missing. “Ten Years of experience” is a far better construction.
